GOVERNOR JAMES SEES TREND TO THE REPUBLICAN PARTY

Thursday's House Vote In Congress on Logan-Walter Bill is Indication

CRITICIZES ROOSEVELT

Says Request To Spend Relief Appropriation Worst Confession of A Political Act

HARRISBURG, April 20.—(INS)—A distinctly Republican trend can be observed today in the nation, in the opinion of Governor Arthur H. James.

Thursday's House vote in Congress on the Logan-Walter bill to curb the rulings and orders of 130 Federal bureaus and agencies by making them subject to court review was cited by the Governor as a "specific example" of this trend. The House overrode New Deal opposition to pass the measure 273 to 97. It now goes to the Senate.

"There were enough votes on that bill to wipe out the policies and the entire purpose of the New Deal," said Governor James, "by refusing to expand the powers of administrative boards."

Governor James criticized President Roosevelt's request for discretionary authority to spend the requested relief appropriation of $975,000,000 within the first eight months of the fiscal year beginning July 1.

"Isn't that the worst confession of a political act ever made?" commented the Governor at his press conference.

No matter how much money was spent by the WPA in Pennsylvania before the election, it would not affect Pennsylvania, said the Governor, adding: "They learned they couldn't buy Pennsylvania in 1938 and Pennsylvania is not on the auction block now."

To reports that he favored a fellow Pennsylvanian, Associate Justice Owen Roberts of the U. S. Supreme Court, for the Republican Presidential nomination in the event he could not obtain it, Governor James retorted:

"Anyone who said that is talking through his hat. I'm not expressing any preferences."

The Governor added that he had no idea how many votes he had and would not know until the balloting began at the Republican convention.

In an incursion into Democratic politics, the Governor, when asked whether "from a political point of view you think Guffey (U. S. Senator Joseph F. Guffey) is a Republican?"

Will Consider Newspapers, Early Artists of Bucks Co.

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 20.—"The German Newspapers of Bucks and Montgomery Counties" will be discussed by Ralph Wood, Ph.D., professor of Modern Languages, Princeton University, when he addresses the Bucks County Historical Society at its annual meeting on the fourth of May. The meetings are two in number, 10:30 and 2:30 p. m., in the museum auditorium.

Dr. Arthur E. Bye, of Holicong, will have as his subject "Early Artists of Bucks County." The two papers will be delivered during the afternoon.

At this 59th annual session, reports of officers will be received, three directors elected and new members elected.

"Birthday" Party Enjoyed By The Sorosis Members

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 20.—A "birthday" party, marking the anniversaries of the Langhorne Sorosis, and also of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, took place in the library on Thursday afternoon, one charter member being in attendance, namely, Mrs. Alfred Marshall.

An excellent account of the organization of Sorosis in 1896 was presented by Mrs. Harry Rothelmer, who informed that three charter members are still living.

Mrs. James Rudhart president, with Mrs. Joseph O. Canby in charge of the program, enjoyed by 100 women.

The Sorosis chorus sang two musical numbers, "Evening Shadows" and "Sunset," the music for the latter number having been written by Chris Rumpf, Langhorne, who teaches music in the Newtown high school. Mrs. Ernest Gamble was in charge of the chorus, with Mrs. Harry Friedrich at the piano.

Mrs. Margaretta DiAngeli, a Philadelphia writer of children's books, as the guest speaker, told how she illustrates her books with highly colored illustrations which fascinate children. "Family Life" is the subject Mrs. DiAngeli has chosen for her stories, basing many of them on incidents which take place in her own family life.

Mrs. Lester Ransom read a paper prepared by Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr., giving the history of the first woman's club in America, which was organized in New York in 1865 with 12 charter members.

Mrs. Paul Vansant favored with a solo.

Motorist Insists On Paying Fine For Violation

Two more motorists paid fines last night for violations of the motor laws. One motorist after the fine had been assessed spoke of some domestic difficulty he was having and the fact that he was a little short of money just at the present time.

The police and the justice of peace, realizing that perhaps a hardship would be imposed upon the offender, offered to give him a "break."

"I don't want a 'break,'" the offender is quoted as saying. "I am guilty and will pay my fine."

This is an example for numerous others who try by every conceivable means to avoid paying for their violations.

WOMEN VOTERS LISTEN TO NUMEROUS ADDRESSES

Five-County Conference Held In Quakertown; Helen Dwight Reed a Speaker

ALSO JEANETTE NICHOLS

QUAKERTOWN, Apr. 20.—The five-county conference of the League of Women Voters was held at "The Red Diamond," here, on Thursday, with 114 attending.

Mrs. Maurice W. Weyl, state chairman of the Departments of Governments and Foreign Policy, presided. The first speaker was Mrs. Fred Wood, of Chester County, who presented the subject of "National Defence." She stated that the League of Women Voters made its first statement on national defense by supporting the recent legislation on neutrality.

Mrs. Glenn R. Marion, of Delaware County, presented the subject of "Opposition to War Referendum Legislation." The recent Ludlow Act in Congress was opposed by the L. W. V.

"The propaganda and hysteria which accompanies the threat of war does not permit the voter to vote intelligently," Mrs. Marion thought a referendum would weaken the force of representative government, which is the backbone of Democracy.

"The Opposition to Racial Discrimination in Immigration Laws" was discussed by Mrs. S. Jervis Brinton, Montgomery County. "Under our present quota system the allotment is 150,000 immigrants per year. There are no restrictions on immigration in the Western Hemisphere, but we still exclude any of the Mongolian race with exception of passports provided for travelers, scholars, teachers, etc."

The final talk of the morning session was by Mrs. Hugh Eastburn, of Bristol, on "Union Now."

Mrs. Eastburn presented an outline of Clarence Streit's book, "Union Now." Mr. Streit served at Geneva for 20 years as foreign correspondent of the New York Times.

Mrs. Eastburn gave it as her opinion that "It is more important for people to realize the necessity of world co-operation than just to discuss some nebulous plan for the future." Mr. Streit has a well formulated plan for union of the Democracies under the same thought of the constitution of the United States Federation."

During the luncheon hour Pan-American Co-operation was discussed by Helen Dwight Reid, Ph. D., International Law, Harvard University lecturer, professor of Political Science at Bryn Mawr College.

Models Fashioned As Pupils Have Transportation Study

NEWPORTVILLE, Apr. 20.—The sixth grade of Newportville school, taught by Leroy Wiser, has just completed a study of modern machines, their inventors, and their effect on humanity as a whole; and have, as a project, made models contrasting modern transportation with that of early colonial times.

The models were made of pasteboard and wood, and include the following subjects—the early locomotive, noted for its ability to attain the "remarkable" speed of 30 miles per hour; the flat boat, the canoe, covered wagon, horse and "buggy," airplane as built and flown by the Wright Brothers; and a later model of the airplane used extensively in the World War.

Transportation booklets will be made showing in greater detail the advancement in modes of travel, from ancient time up to the present.

Remove 26 Bodies From Wreck

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Apr. 20.—Removal of additional bodies from the wreckage of the derailed Lake Shore Limited, crack express of the New York Central Railroad, today, raised the known death toll to 26, with strong possibilities it would reach 30 or even higher.

It was believed that as many as 75 persons had been injured at nine o'clock this morning. A still incomplete list of the injured gave 67 names, and it was believed that the list would grow.

The locomotive of the 16-car train left the tracks with such speed at Gulf Curve, last night, that it tore halfway across an old highway which paralleled the roadbed of the tracks.

Floods Again at Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Apr. 20.—Fed by excessive rains, Pittsburgh's rivers surged past flood-stage today for the second time in a month, with no official indication when a crest would be reached. FARMERS MUCH DELAYED WITH SPRING WORK

Inclement Weather Has Held Up Plowing And Planting

ARE KEPT BUSY INDOORS

LANGHORNE, Apr. 20.—Very little plowing and plowing has been done by farmers because of the inclement weather. Most of the time is being spent by the farmers in cleaning up their places, but the women are getting along very nicely with their spring housecleaning. This was the report made at the meeting of the Middletown Grange held Wednesday night. The farmers are behind in their spring duties and chores, it was universally agreed.

About 35 grangers were present and the master, George Yerkes, was in charge. Announcement was made that the annual plant exchange will feature the next meeting Wednesday evening, May 1, and a home economics committee will also be in charge of the meeting.

In the absence of the lecturer, Mrs. Florence Heston was in charge. Howard Yerkes, who gave a description of the house wren, said the food consists mostly of insects. Each meeting the grangers have a short talk on some local bird.

A debate, Resolved: "That installment buying is fundamentally sound," was held with Russell Newbold and Walker Jackson on the affirmative team, and Jesse Webster and Bjarni Bjarnason on the negative team.

The judges, Samuel Everett, Mrs. Thomas and Edna Yerkes, decided in favor of the negative team.

A sports' committee was appointed consisting of the following: Bjarni Bjarnason, chairman; Stanley Twining, Howard Yerkes, Anna Thomas, Marie and Harry Heston.

One application for membership was received, and the entertainment committee reported that a successful young people's night had been held at the Community House at Woodside recently.

More than 100 young people attending, and a number of older folks, as well, and dancing and games were enjoyed.

STEAL TWO GOATS

Chickens, geese and two goats were reported stolen during the night from the property of Frank Birotti, Magnolia Road and Beaver Dam Road.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The proposed rebuilding of the Sellersville fire house which has been under discussion nearly six months was finally acted upon during the past week at the meeting of the fire company, together with several committees of the fire company in Sellersville council chambers.

Under plans approved borough council will take title to the fire house in order to qualify for a WPA appropriation for the necessary labor. In turn, the fire company will take a 25-year lease on the property at a nominal rental.

Another controversial matter was finally settled when council agreed to furnish steam direct from the electric plant but refused to share the expense of a steam line of approximately 450 feet from the power plant to the fire house. The fire company will finance the cost of the material for this work and the labor will be furnished by WPA. Formerly, borough council furnished coal for heating the fire house.

The renovation plans provide for the rebuilding of the part of the first floor of the building formerly occupied by the borough as a council chamber. The floor of this large room will be dropped approximately four feet to a level with the floor of the present apparatus room. This will provide the necessary room for the new pump, ordered several months ago which will be delivered late in the spring.

As a memorial to their mother, the late Mrs. Mary M. Beck, the children meet each year on their mother's birthday at the home of the youngest daughter, Mrs. Emma B. Eisenhard, Hamilton street, Doylestown.

Ten of the 15 children are still living and were together again, the youngest is 51 and the oldest, 79.

Mrs. Matilda Geddes, one of the daughters, who was severely burned last July is still a patient at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital and in order to make her happy and the day complete the boys and girls visited her for an hour in the afternoon.

While Mrs. Geddes is still in bed, all but a very few minutes each day, she was able to tell the family that she can take a few steps with a nurse's help.

County Agent William F. Greenwalt, speaking at a meeting of the Northampton Farmers' Club, when about 75 members were present, said that aphids are more plentiful on apple trees this Spring than they have been in the past 15 years.

The County Agent, who gave an excellent talk on insects and their control, pointed out that weather conditions, thus far, have been more favorable than for a good many seasons.

County Agent Greenwalt urged the men and women to clean up these conditions as much as possible on their farms by burning in order to kill the larva, and also suggested the rotation of crops which serves as an aid in getting rid of many pests.

In addition to giving a talk, County Agent Greenwalt showed pictures of various insects, worms and bugs: "The canker worm also is out and very busy on the foliage trees at the present time," said the County Agent.

NEARLY 200 ENJOY FELLOWSHIP BANQUET

Second Annual Affair Held In Bristol Methodist Church Here

A PLEASING PROGRAM

Nearly 200 men and women sat down to the second annual anniversary banquet of the Men's Christian Fellowship League of Lower Bucks County, in the Bristol Methodist Church, last night. It was a very successful occasion and a pleasing program was given.

The speaker of the evening was the Rev. George G. Dilworth, secretary, Atlantic District, American Bible Society. "Seeing Things As They Really Are" was the topic of the speaker. His address, while interspersed with wit and humor, was more or less of a serious religious tone. He easily held the attention of his audience.

The group assembled in the main auditorium and then proceeded to the banquet hall which had been attractively festooned with blue and yellow crepe paper streamers. The tables were lighted with blue candles and vases of daffodils carried out the general color scheme.

The president of the organization, Howard Smoyer, who has held office since its inception two years ago, extended greetings. The Rev. W. W. Kern invoked the blessing. The singing was directed by Ralston Hedrick with Fred Miller at the piano.

There were vocal solos by Miss Erna Letelier, Langhorne, while the Miller Trio favored with instrumental selections.

President Smoyer reviewed the history of the organization and traced its growth. He modestly declined all compliments for its development and attributed it to the co-operation of the membership, and the executives of the organization.

The Union Four, a colored quartette from the Union Baptist Church, Trenton, N. J., delighted with their selections which captivated the audience. They responded to a number of encores. Their numbers were given as only colored vocalists can render them.

NUPTIAL CEREMONY SOLEMNIZED HERE TODAY

Maurice J. Mulligan Weds Miss Margaret Fitzpatrick of Trenton

IN ST. MARK'S CHURCH

A nuptial ceremony solemnized at high noon today in St. Mark's R. C. Church, Radcliffe street, united Miss Margaret Fitzpatrick, daughter of P. A. Fitzpatrick, Trenton, N. J., and Maurice J. Mulligan, son of John J. Mulligan, 642 Corson street.

Attendants of the bride were Miss Elizabeth Mulligan, Corson street, a sister of the groom; and Mrs. Richard Connelly, Trenton, N. J.; while groomsmen for Mr. Mulligan, Corson street; with Daniel Fitzpatrick, Trenton, a brother of the bride, acting as usher. Officiating in the chancel was the Rev. Father Paul Baird. Organ music was provided by Miss Katherine Keating, Linden street.

Worn by the bride, the former Miss Fitzpatrick, was a gown of white chiffon, which was enhanced with inserts of lace. The model, which featured a train, was patterned with a square neck-line, and short puffed sleeves. From the Juliet cap gracefully fell a hip-length veil of tulle. White satin slippers were worn, and the bride carried a white prayer book, from which chapters of white sweet peas were suspended on white satin ribbons.

The costumes of the bride's attendants were fashioned alike, with Miss Mulligan being gowned in pink, and Mrs. Connelly in poudre blue. The gown of Miss Mulligan, made of pink embroidered net, had a form-fitting bodice, with heart neck-line, and floor-length full skirt. The sleeves were puffed, and trim of blue grosgrain ribbon bows were at each shoulder; and thrice encircling the skirt were inserts of blue ribbon visible through the net, with three bows on the outside. The headpiece was a cluster of pink artificial flowers, from which streamers of pink grosgrain ribbon fell to the back of the shoulders. Sandals were of white; and an arm bouquet of vari-colored Spring flowers was carried.

Mrs. Connelly's gown, cut like that worn by Miss Mulligan, was of poudre blue net with trim of pink ribbon. Her headpiece was similar, but in poudre blue tone; her slippers were of blue, and she carried an arm bouquet of mixed Spring blossoms.

ASKING MEXICO TO ARBITRATE

Washington has been exceedingly patient with Mexico in the dispute over the expropriation of American-owned property, particularly the oil lands. In spite of the bitterness caused by the action of the Mexican government under its communistic policy, this country has not only waited with great restraint for some definite solution of claims but the Washington administration also has co-operated with Mexico economically to the latter's benefit.

Now, however, Secretary Hull has transmitted to the Mexican ambassador at Washington a strongly worded note demanding settlement of recent claims and others dating back in some cases for 70 years. He points out that while European nations are settling their disputes by force, the countries of the Americas employ peaceful means. In all fairness, Secretary Hull suggests submission of the expropriation dispute to an impartial tribunal for arbitration.

There may be some misunderstanding of what this dispute is about. The United States is not protesting expropriation. In his latest note, Secretary Hull again recognizes the right of Mexico to take over American-owned property for "public" purposes. "But," writes Mr. Hull, the taking of property without adequate, effective, and prompt compensation is not expropriation but is confiscation, and it is no less confiscation because there may be an expressed intent to pay at some time in the future."

The Cardenas government itself has encouraged misapprehension of the true cases of the trouble by announcing that there is "no divergence of opinion between the government of the United States and that of Mexico" on the subject of expropriation. That is only a half-truth; for Washington has made it plain that the continued delay in taking measures for compensation is a violation of every principle of equity or international law.

If Mexico herself is not willing to take the initiative and give immediate and adequate compensation, the obvious alternative is arbitration by an impartial tribunal. Even by suggesting such a solution, the United States is being as generous to Cardenas as it has been for years. Other first class powers would have served notice upon Mexico at the first step toward confiscation that prompt payment was in order, or else.

Miss Reid mentioned the Pan-American Conferences held in Buenos Aires, Lima and Panama. "The Conferences were never political organizations, but were called in order to provide additional machinery to meet the occasion of a crisis." Dr. Fenwick Bryn Mawr, was one of the seven from Pan-American countries to form a committee for the duration of the war. This committee does not make policies but is prepared to advise Pan-American Republics. It was told, The Pan-American Conference provided the countries in the Western Hemisphere with a zone of safety, which provide an exact boundary taking in the trade routes which must be kept free of belligerent activities. The United States, being dependent on South America, considers it best to have a good neighbor policy.

The final address of the afternoon, entitled "Dollars or Bullets," was given by Miss Jeanette P. Nichols, Ph. D., of Columbia University, New York, author and historian. To illustrate her talk, she had money of various denominations, gold, English pound notes, bullets and a gun. It is interesting, said Miss Nichols, to learn the great difference in value of the same money in different countries. "Money has high emotional value which is shown when there is lack of substance. The result is always bullets in form of force. The United States is endeavoring to use dollars instead of bullets by supporting Secretary Hull's trade agreement policy in order to increase foreign trade." She felt that a study for better understanding of international exchange would remedy the differences in monetary values.

The meeting of Bucks County League of Women Voters followed the adjournment of the Conference, with

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS
Gabrielle Snow, lovely 18-year-old daughter of wealthy Samuel Snow, the oil magnate, falls in love with Peter Parsons, a handsome young soda clerk. Peter, however, is a talented singing pianist and aspires to become a composer. Gabrielle's parents object to the match because Peter has no social background. So one night, while out riding with Gabrielle's friend, Dorothy Mackey, and the latter's father, Tony, Gaby and Peter decide to get married immediately. Tony prevails upon Dorothy to make it a double wedding. After the ceremony, Gabrielle recalls that her uncle's will stipulated that if she married before she was 21, she would not get her inheritance until she became 35. "I'm glad of it," Peter announces, "I'd never have married you if I'd known you would have so much money. Now you'll have to be dependent on me!" They return home to face the music. At first, Mr. Snow in all for having the marriage annulled, but when Gabrielle convinces him that she really loves Peter, he gives them his blessing. Mrs. Snow also relents. Peter declines their offer of financial help, insisting on supporting his wife himself, so the young couple rent an unpretentious $25-a-month apartment. Despite its plainness, Gabrielle awakens the first morning with a feeling of supreme happiness. She calls Peter who, upon seeing her, says, "Then it isn't a dream!" But all is not so serene when Peter returns from work that night to find his home refurnished by his in-laws.

CHAPTER TEN
"Can't you understand how I feel, dear?" Peter began quite gently; "can't you understand that I want to take care of you myself? It isn't just all pride—I want to make our way!"

Gabrielle had been pacing the floor and, as she neared him, she pulled her down on his knees. "Gaby—" he murmured into her fragrant hair, "I tell you I'm going to make lots of money if you'll only wait. I won't have you taking things from my folks!"

Peter's arms were having their effect on Gabrielle, and all at once she wasn't angry any more. She clung to him and he, seeming to take her actions for agreement, held her tightly to him.

And their first quarrel began and ended. It was only one of many and, once they had started, there seemed to be no stopping them. Day after day, Peter came home to find newly acquired furnishings in the apartment, and lovely new garments hanging in the closet.

The quarrels became real things, and a wall of coolness began to erect itself between them. True, it was often broken through by their ardent love for each other. . . . The many bitter quarrels ended always with Gabrielle promising not to take money from her folks again, and by Peter vowing that he loved her more than life itself.

One evening in early August when the thermometer stood near the century mark most of the day, Peter came home and gayly tossed a letter into Gabrielle's lap.

"Why, Peter?" exclaimed Gabrielle, when she had read the short missive, "do you suppose your cousin can really sell your song?"

"Well, Mrs. Parsons, the letter sounds like it, don't you think?" Peter grinned, kissing her.

"He says he's received the very finest comments from several song publishers, but if you were only there with an orchestra you could probably get on a radio hook-up, and place all of your songs, Oh, Peter, why don't you go?"

"What would I use for money, Mrs. Parsons?"

"Daddy would let you have it," she began eagerly.

"Nix, I'll wait until I land a song, then I'll have enough of my own," he said quietly.

"Peter, that's being silly!" "Probably; but that's how I feel about it."

"But, Daddy would be glad to advance you the money."

"Out," he said airily. "Let's eat—I'm starved."

Gabrielle got up and went into the kitchenette. She returned almost at once with a plate of tiny, fancy-cut sandwiches which she placed on the card table in front of him. She brought iced tea, then sat down beside him.

"I've eaten, Peter. There's some cake Mother brought too. It's awfully good—Violet made it."

Peter eyed the sandwiches soberly.

"They look like a party, Gaby," he commented dryly.

"I had two tables of bridge this afternoon. I simply have to entertain a little bit."

Peter lugubriously put a whole sandwich into his mouth. It was followed by another and then, another. Gabrielle watched him, her expression setting into stubborn lines.

"I suppose you want potatoes and meat," she said.

"I could do with some solid food at that," remarked Peter. "After all, I've had sandwiches day after day now, for weeks!"

Gabrielle sat very still, her mouth in a red pout, her eyes staring straight out the south window with an assumed indifference she was far from feeling. Her bosom rose and fell swiftly, her whole face reflected resentment and slowly mounting anger.

Hot as it was, she thought almost crying, why should Peter expect her to stay in that tiny place and cook! Next winter, she told herself, feeling a little bit guilty as she noticed him eat the bits of sandwiches hungrily, she would go to a cooking school. Then she'd prepare nice meals for Peter.

She saw he had eaten all of them, so went to the kitchenette and brought him a large wedge of feather-light, deeply frosted cake. She then filled his glass with tea again. And she sat down to wait for him to finish. After all, this was a special occasion—only, of course, Peter didn't know it yet. . . . Putting the last bite of cake into his mouth, Peter turned to her and said, smiling:

"That's a wonderful cake, Gaby! Why don't you have Violet teach you how it's done?"

"Maybe I will, when it gets cool," she said, mollified somewhat by his apparent return to good humor.

"Mother asked me again why we did not come over to the house and stay through the hot summer weather, Peter," she added, looking rather reproachfully at him. "We could have such good meals there, and at no cost—if only you would, Peter. They'd be so happy to have us too!"

"No. I want to live with my wife all by myself," replied Peter comfortably. He reached out and pulled her over to him, running his hand over her smooth, tanned arm with evident satisfaction.

"Here with a loaf of bread beneath the bough, a jug of wine, a book of verse—and thou beside me singing in the wilderness—ah, wilderness is paradise now," he quoted blissfully.

Gabrielle asked doubtfully: "Shakespeare?"

"No, little goose. It's Omar Khayyam," he laughed, holding her closer. "Why don't you read the old boy—he's over there among my books."

He pointed to the low bookcase—his only contribution to the room's furnishings.

"I will—when it gets cool," she assented, her brow furrowed.

But she wasn't thinking much about the work of Omar Khayyam, or anyone else for that matter; she was wondering how she should tell Peter of the birthday surprise from her parents without making him feel badly about forgetting the day.

"Someday," Peter dreamed on aloud. "I'm going to have a room

MULHOLLAND'S TEAM TO USE THE GRUNDY FIELD

Johnny Mulholland, manager of the Bristol A. A. team, has announced a change in his plans for the playing of home games this season. The Bristol A. A. will use Grundy's field which also is called St. Ann's field at Garden street and Jefferson avenue.

Manager Mulholland will put the field into shape and intends to open his season shortly. Mulholland also expects to have some seating arrangements for the fans.

Instead of practicing on Leedom's field tomorrow, Manager Mulholland will shift to Grundy's field and requests all players to report there at 1:30 o'clock.

Manager Mulholland wants all his players to be on hand as the opening game might be the following week. Several new players so far who are trying for positions are Barnes Richter, a crack infielder from Cornell; Kelly and Cahill, outfielders; Palumbo, a promising young player of Bristol, and several other good boys. The playing field will be put in tip top shape and two rows of seats will be put up to make the fans right at home. The local club will play several practice games before taking on the Burlington Spartans on May 8th at the local field. Several of last season's players will be back in VanZant, a catcher; Palowicz, on first; Johnny Stallone, on 2nd base; "Tim" Harrison, of Hulmeville, on short; Chas. Hughes, on third; Dick and Hunter, outfielders.

Manager Mulholland is looking for a good twirler to take the place of Danny Matthews and Geo. Lesnak who are now playing minor league ball in Trenton and Columbus.

BRISTOL HIGH LOSES TO BULLDOGS, 3 TO 0

Not satisfied with the wind and rain, plus cold weather marred the opening day festivities of Bristol High's initial diamond battle of the Lower Bucks County League for the 1940 season, coach John Hoffman led his band of Bulldogs into town to further the cause of gloom in the Cards' camp by administering the bucket of whitewash upon the local aggregation who were coated with a 3-0 setback, here yesterday afternoon. And just to make things more fitting for the occasion, the umpire failed to make his personal appearance and the game was consequently held up half an hour before starting.

The defeat sent some 50—more or less—Cardinal faithfuls home (the rain had sent the other 150 home an hour earlier) with the same look on their faces that can be seen on the man of the man who just missed the midnight train home from work.

Honors for the day were evenly divided on the winning side between a pair of "exes"—Bill Provost, ex-donor of the catching paraphernalia, and Marty Phillips, former roamer of the daisy fields. Provost, who took Phillips place among the flycatchers, laced out two of the six safeties the Bulldogs chalked up in the hit column and drove in their only two earned runs with a resounding double in the third inning. He also handled himself well in the other gardens.

Phillips earned the other half of the "bacon" which the Bulldogs took home with them by taking the firing line and proceeding to mow down the fearless Cards with a quartet of bingles. His ten strikeouts proved he had the local gang swinging lustily at his curves and fast one. But to top off the day's work, Phillips helped himself to half his team's total hits by collecting a double and two singles in three trips to the platter for a perfect day with the willow.

AL DRIVER, NEWTOWN, PITCHES "DREAM GAME"

LANGHORNE, Apr. 20.—Al Driver, colored star and all-around athlete from Newtown, carved himself a niche in the schoolboy "hall of fame" alongside many stars of bygone days from the scholastic ranks when he hurled a "dream game" of all pitchers here yesterday afternoon.

Yes, he realized the fondest dreams of many a toiler of the peak when he faced 21 Langhorne batters and proceeded to mow down 21 in a row without a hit, a run, not allowing a single batter to reach first base—a perfect ball game.

The sensational colored star breezed by the third strike on no less than 37.1% of the opposing batsmen or to be more specific, 12 Redskins hit the dust via the strikeout route as Driver sailed along smoothly and uninterupted toward his goal. The nearest thing that resembled a hit for Langhorne was a long poke to deep center field by Ed Biedka, who opposed Driver on the hill for the home club. But Dave Matthews, who patrols the center garden for coach Allen Tomlinson's Indians, raced back fast and took it over his head after a hard run to have the day for Driver. No other Redskin could get the ball out of the infield.

It might be inserted here that the final score was 1-0 with the Indians of course carting off the spoils of victory.

"GOLDEN TERROR" TO MEET "DYNAMITE JOE COX"

TRENTON, Apr. 20.—Another evening of action galore is promised Central Jersey wrestling fans at the Arena tonight when the "Golden Terror" meets "Dynamite Joe Cox" in a contest that is sure to be full of thrills in one fall, one hour time limit.

The winner of this contest is promised a match with Ernie Dusek or Jim Londos, present titleholder, at a later date, so both of the contestants of the main bout will do their utmost to secure a win at any cost. "The Terror" is undefeated in the Trenton Arena, and naturally, Dynamite Joe Cox will stop at nothing to be the first to defeat the 303 lb. one man riot squad. Although the Cox-Terror setto is a natural in every sense of the word, and a thrilling brawl is anticipated, a number of new favorites will appear on the card tonight of fans. The management has secured a very strong supporting card.

In the semi-windup, a newcomer in Heinie Olsen comes to grips with Rudy Dusek, the elder member of the Dusek "Riot Squad," in a contest which should rival the main event in action. In a special thirty-minute match Warren Buckwinkle who made such a hit with the fans here last week meets that clever Henry Kolkovitch. Maurice LaChapelle meets Ed Cooke in another 30 minute match and a new-comer to the Trenton Arena, Abe Kaplan, versus the rowdy, Cliff Olsen, the "Mad Swede."

The management feels that in staging the shows on Saturday evening, they are abiding by the wishes of the majority of the fans who patronize wrestling. First bout starts 8:45 p. m.

Current School Problems Discussed By C. Boehm

EDGELY, Apr. 20.—Charles Boehm, assistant superintendent of Bucks County schools, spoke at East Bristol Township P. T. A. on Thursday evening regarding current school problems.

Mr. Boehm stated that "there are more and more parents who work with their children at home before they become of school age. Some of the first graders can read and write before they enter school, and some parents insist that their child be put in second grade immediately. It makes the child feel superior over the other children."

Guffey who seeks the Democratic nomination for re-election) deserves the nomination?" replied:

"I don't think that any representative of the public, whether in Congress or in the State, should be a mere rubber stamp for the President and pride himself on being the Number 1 Democrat because he approved everything that ever came out of the White House. For him to campaign on that ground is no particular compliment in my opinion. I don't see that that's anything to be proud of."

Governor James said he was sure

Pennsylvania would remain Republican this Fall.

"I'm as sure of that as I am that I'm sitting here in my chair," he remarked.

Trenton Colored Man Is Held For Bucks Authorities

A colored man is being detained in Trenton and today it is planned to file a detainer against him for an alleged attack upon a white girl in Bucks County.

According to the Bucks County police Alfred Long, 22, Lamberton street, Trenton, N. J., is accused of bringing Bessie Burgess, 19, white, Academy street, from Trenton into Bucks County and attacking her.

Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Penna. Motor Police officers, Cooper, Jones and Cristman, went to Trenton yesterday and after questioning Long stated that he had admitted coming into Bucks County with the Burgess girl but told the officers that she had come voluntarily.

Bucks County police say that the pair met on April 11th at 9 p. m., at the corner of Academy and Montgomery streets in Trenton. Then according to the officers the girl claims that her feet and hands were tied and her mouth taped. The attack is alleged to have taken place in a field near Penn Valley between the two bridges. The couple then returned to Trenton and the girl was released, she says, at the same corner where she had met Long. Two days later she is said to have told a friend of her mother, who in turn informed the police. Long was taken into custody by the Trenton police and the Bucks County authorities summoned.

QUARANTINED BUT "OPEN FOR BUSINESS AS USUAL!"

"I MIGHT be typhoid," said the doctor. "Stay in bed until we see how the tests come out."

"But, Doc, I can't stay in bed," said Mr. Ashcroft. "I've got to make some important business calls today and tomorrow. Can't I just go downstairs to the telephone?"

"Sorry, you'll have to stay in bed," the doctor insisted. "Too bad you haven't an extension telephone by your bed."

"Maybe we can have one installed today," suggested Mrs. Ashcroft.

"I'm afraid not," replied the doctor. "You see, I'll have to quarantine the house and the telephone man won't be allowed to come in."

It seemed pretty hopeless, but Mrs. Ashcroft decided to try any way. She called the Bell Telephone Business Office.

"Is it possible," she asked the Service Representative, "to have a telephone installed beside the bed of the patient in a house that's quarantined? I know it sounds impossible, but it would be such a help if you could..."

"Yes, Mrs. Ashcroft, I think we can do that," replied the Service Representative. "Let me make sure and call you back."

That afternoon, one of our installers made the necessary connections on the outside wires, climbed a ladder to the window of Mr. Ashcroft's bedroom, slid a board with a telephone attached into the room. In a few minutes he had installed the telephone beside the bed without ever entering the house!

Mr. and Mrs. Ashcroft were a little amazed and more than a little pleased. Mr. Ashcroft's illness never became serious, so with the help of his bedside telephone, business went on "as usual."

This was an unusual telephone job. But the ingenuity, the teamwork and the sincere desire to give better-than-average service is typical of telephone men and women. So, whenever you have a problem in which good telephone service can help, tell us about it. Your Service Representative is trained to advise you and we'll all work together to solve your problem.

By the way, do you have an extension telephone beside your bed? It's mighty convenient when you're ill, when calls come at night or while you're dressing. Saves a great deal of stair-climbing, too, and gives added protection for just a few cents a day!
